SHUYI (SELENE) GAO

1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Yu’s Opposition completely fails to avoid his obligation to arbitrate his state court claims.
 3 Although BDI moved to compel these claims to arbitration based on four separate arbitration 4 agreements, Yu only responds with respect to one of those agreements—the ECIAA (“Employee 5 Confidentiality and Inventions Assignment Agreement”—while disregarding the Stock Option 6 Award Agreement, Patent Acquisition Agreement, and Undertaking Agreement to which his state 7 court claims remain equally bound. Ultimately, with respect to all four of the agreements, Yu fails 8 to place any of those agreements “in issue” so as to warrant the jury trial he now seeks under 9 Section 4 of the Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”): he fails to provide the requisite unequivocal 10 denial to adequately challenge the authentication of his handwritten signatures, and he fails to 11 provide legally sufficient or admissible evidence to corroborate his specious denial. All are fatal to 12 his challenge. For these reasons, BDI respectfully renews its request that this Court compel Yu to 13 arbitrate the threshold issue of arbitrability of his state court claims under the ECIAA or the other 14 three agreements, while staying these proceedings in the interim and enjoining Yu from continuing 15 to litigate any compelled claims in his concurrent state court proceeding.

16 II. LAW & ARGUMENT

17 A. Yu Fails to Place the ECIAA “In Issue” For Purposes of an FAA Jury Trial

18 Yu’s challenge to the ECIAA’s formation is unavailing because he fails to sufficiently 19 place the agreement “in issue” within the meaning of Section 4 of the FAA. Section 4 of the FAA 20 provides that “[i]f the making of the arbitration agreement . . . be in issue, the [district] court shall 21 proceed summarily to the trial thereof.” 9 U.S.C. § 4. The “‘making of an arbitration agreement’ is 22 ‘in issue’ only if a material fact exists to the agreement’s formation.” Rahimi v. Nintendo of Am., Inc., 936 F. Supp. 2d 1141, 1144 (N.D. Cal. 2013). To that end, “there must be an unequivocal 23 denial that an agreement has been made, accompanied by supporting affidavits providing some 24 evidence substantiating the claim.” Canada Life Assur. Co. v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 242 25 F. Supp. 2d 344, 354 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (citing Sphere Drake Ins. Ltd. V. Clarendon Nat’l Ins. Co., 26 263 F.3d 26, 30 (2d Cir. 2001)). Yu has failed to satisfy this burden. His soft denials fall far short 27 of the “unequivocal denial” required to put the making of the arbitration agreement at issue, and

1 the specious “corroboration” he provides is inadmissible and insufficient. This Court has full 2 authority to determine that Yu agreed to the ECIAA—and, thereby, the agreement to arbitrate 3 related claims—as a matter of law.

4 1. Yu Fails to Unequivocally Deny the Making of the ECIAA

5 Defendants have authenticated Yu’s handwritten signatures on the ECIAA, among others—a 6 burden that is “not high.” Prostek v. Lincare, Inc., 2023 WL 2588098, *5 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 7 2023). BDI has offered declarations from Human Resources professionals who attested to more 8 than sufficient corroboration to authenticate Yu’s handwritten signature on the various agreements: 9 many of these persons discussed some of the agreements with Yu, did not receive or otherwise 10 hear of a request from Yu to alter or delete the arbitration provisions therein, and witnessed him 11 sign some of the agreements. See Kalasho v. BMW of North America, LLC, 520 F. Supp. 3d 1288, 12 1293 (S.D. Cal. 2021) (witness testimony sufficient where declarant “states that the attached [] 13 Agreement is a true copy of the original document kept in Dealer’s files, that such documents and 14 files are prepared by Dealer in its ordinary course of business when a vehicle is leased, and that 15 [declarant] maintains control over the original documents kept in Dealer’s files”); Prostek, 2023 16 WL 2588098, at *7 (same). Additionally, BDI has offered further evidence via a properly certified 17 handwriting expert who has authenticated Yu’s signatures on the various agreements. From this 18 evidence, the Court can certainly conclude that a jury “could reasonably find [] the evidence [] 19 authentic” per Federal Rule of Evidence 901. Kalasho, 520 F. Supp. 3d at 1288 (emphasis added).¹

20 Yu attempts to challenge BDI’s authentication by stating: “I am confident that this is not a 21 document I signed, and that the arbitration agreement contained on page 11 of the ECIAA was not 22 included in any document that I signed.” He argues that this is an “unequivocal denial” sufficient 23 to meet the requisite standard delineated above. Opp. 7:13-18. Not so.

 26 1 Note: Although the Opposition suggests that “authenticating” a signature is not the same as “establishing whether a 27 signature is in fact proof of execution,” it provides no citation for this proposition, Opp. 9:13-17, no theory or 28 explanation for how an authentic signature on the ECIAA would not constitute proof of execution, and no explanation for why Yu applied the authentication standard himself in his opposition to BDI’s prior motion to compel arbitration filed on July 29, 2023 with this court. Previous Opp., ECF 24, Case No. 3:23-cv-03503-SI. Indeed, that opposition argued the authentication standard almost exclusively, using the word “authenticate” 10 times; “authenticity” 8 times; “authentic” 5 times; “authenticated” 2 times; and “authentication” 2 times.

1 For the purposes of challenging a handwritten signature's authenticity, soft or evasive 2 denials that do not directly allege a "skilled forgery" are insufficient. Prostek, 2023 WL 2588098, 3 *6 (authenticity challenge insufficient where employee denied recollection of the agreement, 4 claimed "she would not have signed it if she had seen," but "d[id] not deny that the signature on 5 the Arbitration Agreement [wa]s hers or claim that the signature was somehow forged") (citing 6 Iyere v. Wise Auto Group, 87 Cal. App. 5th 747, 758 (2023) (authenticity challenge insufficient 7 where "a party confronted with his or her handwritten signature on an arbitration agreement is 8 unable to allege that the signature is inauthentic or forged")). Soft denials are viewed with 9 particular suspicion when the employee—as here—nonetheless acknowledges having signed at 10 least some documents. Id. at *7 (employee's "acknowledgment that she signed a 'stack of 11 documents,' combined with her failure" to unequivocally deny the signature itself "[wa]s 12 determinative").

13 Further, even express forgery allegations fail to raise a genuine issue when overly vague or 14 undetailed. See, e.g., Spaeny v. TJX Companies, Inc., 2022 WL 334186, *2 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 15 2022) (unequivocal forgery allegation insufficient where "plaintiff d[id] not attest that she 16 witnessed her records being forged, nor d[id] she explain in any detail who specifically committed 17 forgery, when, how often, or how she would have witnessed such conduct"); Stafford v. BAART 18 Behavioral Health Services, 2015 WL 13764217, at *5 (C.D. Cal. July 20, 2015) (In light of 19 "Stafford's failure to provide anything more than bare assertions that the signature is not hers, the 20 Court would find that Stafford's signature on the arbitration agreement is authentic and that the 21 arbitration agreement is valid").

22 Here, Yu admits that he signed several documents on the same date² and, notably, fails to 23 directly allege that the handwritten signature on the ECIAA is inauthentic or otherwise forged.
 24 Compare Yu Dec. ¶ 6 ("I never signed any document ... with the title ECIAA") with *Degla Grp.
 25 for Invs., Inc. v. Boconcept USA, Inc.*, 2010 WL 11509053, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2010) 26 ("Counter-defendants assert that Hasan Sidky 'did not sign any guarantee,' but do not address the 27 fact that his name is handwritten in the signature block below the Acknowledgment."). As to the ² Note: Yu Dec. ¶ 4 (referring to "documents I signed that day").

1 latter, his Opposition instead suggests that the signature page of the ECIAA might have been 2 swapped, but Yu fails to endorse or reference this theory in his declaration. Oppenheimer & Co. v.
 3 Neidhardt, 56 F.3d 352, 358 (2d Cir. 1995) (self-serving interpretation of agreement’s omission of 4 certain language insufficient corroborating evidence to raise genuine dispute); Prostek, 2023 WL 5 2588098, at *8 (“If a party cannot challenge the handwritten signature [directly], there is no basis 6 to conclude that the signature was skillfully forged or that the party did not actually sign the 7 document”). His failure to directly allege that his signature is inauthentic or forged—coupled with 8 his admission that he signed some documents—is therefore fatal to his challenge to the ECIAA’s 9 formation. Prostek, 2023 WL 2588098, at *7 (“These [two] facts are key” and “determinative”).

10 Further, even had he alleged actual forgery (which he did not), Yu “d[id] not attest that []he 11 witnessed h[is] records being forged, nor d[id] []he explain in any detail who specifically 12 committed the forgery, [or] when, how often, or how []he would have witnessed such conduct.”
 13 Spaeny, 2022 WL 334186, at *2. Notably, Yu’s declaration does not reference the words 14 “authentic,” “forged,” “unequivocal,” or “deny.” And his Opposition’s purported “unequivocal 15 denial” merely rests on Yu’s “den[ial of] his agreement to the ECIAA”—it makes no mention of 16 the signature itself. Opp. 7:16. These vague and amorphous “denials” fall far short of the 17 unequivocal repudiation of authenticity required by this Circuit for presumptively genuine 18 handwritten signatures. Walley v. Bank, 2022 WL 2189635, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 21, 2022) (no 19 “genuine dispute of material fact” where plaintiff “argues that the arbitration agreement was 20 fraudulently executed, but he submits no evidence or even a specific allegation of fraud”).

21 Yu’s challenge to the formation of this agreement must therefore fail because he has not 22 “unequivocally denied” that the agreement was made.

23 2. Yu Fails to Provide Legally Sufficient or Admissible Evidence to Support 24 His Otherwise Uncorroborated Soft Denial

25 Yu has also failed to corroborate his purported unequivocal denial with “evidentiary facts 26 showing that there is a dispute of fact to be tried.” Oppenheimer, 56 F.3d at 358 (“If the party 27 seeking arbitration has substantiated the entitlement by a showing of evidentiary facts, the party 28 opposing may not rest on a denial” alone). Rather, the sole evidence he offers is not only legally

1 insufficient and/or factually inadmissible, but it supports the existence of a valid arbitration 2 agreement.

3 First, and perhaps most importantly, the declaration of Yu’s former counsel, David Lowe, 4 affirmatively demonstrates that a valid agreement to arbitrate exists. Exhibit B to the Lowe 5 Declaration contains a series of email communications between Lowe and prior counsel for 6 Defendant BDI. Lowe specifically states on behalf of his client that an “arbitration provision is 7 acceptable” and that he has “reviewed the existing arbitration agreement and would be willing to 8 recommend to Mr. Yu that we not contest...” enforcement. Lowe Dec. Ex. B. By Plaintiff’s 9 former counsel’s own words (and as expressly set forth in the tolling agreement also contained in 10 Exhibit B), an agreement to arbitrate clearly exists.

11 Second, Lowe’s Declaration provides no corroboration that Yu did not sign the ECIAA.
 12 Lowe states that in January 2021 he verbally told BDI’s former counsel that “it was Yu’s position 13 that he had never signed the [ECIAA] or agreed to arbitration.” Lowe Decl. ¶ 6. Setting aside that 14 this contains a double layer of inadmissible hearsay and wholly contradicts its own Exhibit B, 15 Lowe’s Declaration provides no insight into the underlying facts surrounding the ECIAA’s actual 16 formation more than three years earlier: Lowe does not state that he spoke to independent 17 witnesses, made an independent assessment, or reviewed any evidence suggesting a forgery. He 18 instead merely regurgitates Yu’s conclusory denial, which neither changes the character of the 19 denial nor provides independent corroboration—while waiving the Attorney-Client Privilege. As 20 such, this purported evidence is also insufficient to raise a genuine dispute on summary judgment.
 21 Arellano v. Cnty. of San Diego, 2020 WL 4921983, at *13 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2020) (“[E]vidence 22 [was] insufficient to raise a genuine dispute [when] based on inadmissible hearsay in a conclusory, 23 uncorroborated, self-serving declaration that includes facts beyond the [declarants] personal 24 knowledge.”).

25 Third, Yu’s identification of the ECIAA’s alleged “red flags”—including the lack of a page 26 number or handwritten date accompanying some, but not all, of Yu’s three handwritten signatures 27 on the ECIAA—fails to raise a genuine issue of fact. Oppenheimer & Co., 56 F.3d at 358 (finding 28

1 self-serving interpretation of agreement's omission of certain language insufficient corroborating 2 evidence to raise genuine dispute, even when paired with a direct denial).

3 Fourth, Chrisman's declaration similarly fails to provide the requisite corroboration. As set 4 forth in BDI's concurrent Motion to Exclude, Chrisman's "certification" was via a truncated online 5 course that is not recognized by either of the two accrediting bodies in the field of forensic 6 document examination, her analysis is unprincipled and inconsistent with established authorities, 7 and her conclusions are internally contradictory.³ Ultimately, "experts are expected to verify the 8 reliability of the data underlying their conclusions independently instead of simply adopting the 9 representations of an interested party." Baker v. Firstcom, 2018 WL 2676636, at *2 (C.D. Cal.
 10 May. 8, 2018) (excluding "Beth Chrisman on the grounds that her methods and testimony do not 11 comport with the legal requirements of an expert witness"). Chrisman fails to meet this 12 expectation, thus defeating any utility derived from her "findings."

13 Nevertheless, should the Court find her testimony determinative of whether Yu raised a 14 sufficiently genuine dispute over the ECIAA's formation, BDI at a minimum requests that this 15 Court hold its decision on this issue in abeyance pending its determination of BDI's Motion to 16 Exclude Chrisman's Declaration and accompanying Daubert hearing if needed. Haas v. Travelex 17 Ins. Servs. Inc., 2023 WL 4281248, at *3 (C.D. Cal. June 27, 2023) (finding no genuine dispute 18 despite dueling experts where one expert was unqualified and excludable under Fed. R. Evid. 702).

19 Per the above, Yu has failed to satisfy his burden of lodging an adequate challenge to the 20 formation of the ECIAA: he has failed to unequivocally deny the three separate handwritten 21 signatures contained within the ECIAA and has simultaneously failed to provide legally sufficient 22 corroborating evidence. As such, this Court should compel Yu's claims to arbitration, where the 23 arbitrator can there determine threshold issues of arbitrability under the ECIAA based on its 24 express incorporation of the AAA rules. Brennan v. Opus Bank, 796 F.3d 1125, 1130 (9th Cir.
 25 2015) ("We therefore hold that the district court did not err in concluding that these parties' 26
 27

28 ³ Note: For a detailed assessment of the deficiencies in the Chrisman Declaration, please see Defendants' concurrently filed Motion to Exclude Expert Testimony of Beth Chrisman.

1 incorporation of the AAA rules constituted “clear and unmistakable” evidence of their intent to 2 submit the arbitrability dispute to arbitration.”).

3 B. The Three Other Agreements Provide an Equal and Independent Basis for 4 Compelling Yu’s State Court Claims to Arbitration on the Threshold Issue of 5 Arbitrability

6 Irrespective of the ECIAA, the three other agreements Yu signed provide three separate 7 and independent ground for this Court to compel all of Yu’s state court claims to arbitration and 8 enjoin the continued litigation of the state court claims, pursuant to the authority delegated to this 9 Court under the FAA and Convention. As such, Yu’s failure to unequivocally deny the formation 10 of those three other agreements or the enforceability of their respective delegation clauses is fatal 11 to his challenge to Defendants’ motion.

12 1. Yu’s Other Agreements and State Court Claims Are Still Squarely at Issue

13 Yu suggests that this Court’s power to compel arbitration is limited to the ECIAA 14 declaratory relief claim. He is wrong. Both the FAA and Convention empower federal courts to 15 compel arbitration, even when the allegedly arbitrable claims are not immediately before it.
Prograph Int’l Inc. v. Barhydt, 928 F. Supp. 983, 992 (N.D. Cal. 1996) (Orrick, J.) (granting 16 employer’s request under the Convention to compel former employee to arbitrate claims it had 17 already filed against employer in a separate and concurrent state court action).

18 Regardless, declaratory relief actions that seek to invalidate or enjoin the enforcement of an 19 arbitration agreement squarely place in issue the claims such actions seek to keep from arbitration.

20 Camp 1 Truckee LLC v. Daxko, LLC, 2022 WL 3215075, *10 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 2022) 21 (compelling arbitration where resisting party filed a state court action seeking declaratory 22 judgment to invalidate an arbitration agreement, after responding party removed and moved to 23 compel arbitration of the same claims the declaratory relief action sought to guard); Aberle 24 Hosiery Co. v. Am. Arb. Ass’n, 337 F. Supp. 90, 91 (E.D. Pa. 1972) (adjudicating post-removal 25 motion to compel arbitration of claims underlying state court declaratory relief action to invalidate 26 arbitration agreement, as motion was essentially “a counterclaim arising out of the subject matter 27 of a plaintiff’s suit”). Here, the purpose of Yu’s declaratory relief action was to prevent BDI from 28 compelling arbitration of his state court claims. Third Complaint ¶ 14 (specifically identifying attempts to compel these claims to arbitration in separate proceedings). A finding that such state court claims are arbitrable under one or more of the other three agreements would necessarily moot Yu’s declaratory relief action. Camp 1 Truckee, 2022 WL 3215075, at *10 (recognizing that where “the parties agreed to arbitrate arbitrability, it is entirely possible that the arbitrator will...resolve the [declaratory] dispute” over the arbitration agreement altogether by finding the underlying claims arbitrable). As such, contrary to his claims, Yu’s declaratory relief action equally implicates all four of the agreements rather than just the ECIAA.

2. Yu Does Not Unequivocally Deny That He Entered into the Other Agreements

Because Yu’s declaratory relief action implicates all four of the agreements, Yu’s failure to meaningfully challenge the formation of the remaining three agreements is therefore fatal to his Opposition. Indeed, Yu fails to both unequivocally deny entering into those agreements and to present evidence substantiating any such denial. Yu’s declaration fails to deny that he signed the Stock Option Award Agreement, the Undertaking Agreement, or the Patent Assignment Agreement. Honig v. Comcast of Georgia I, LLC, 537 F. Supp. 2d 1277, 1283 (N.D. Ga. 2008) (no unequivocal denial when the plaintiff did not deny in “an affidavit or a declaration, but instead reli[e]d solely upon a conclusory statement in her brief”). His failure to deny these agreements is particularly glaring considering several HR representatives personally witnessed his signing. Fan Dec. ¶¶ 4-5 Wu Dec. ¶ 5. Nor does he challenge the delegation clauses within those agreements.

Rather, Yu argues that the choice-of-law provisions within those agreements (delegating Hong Kong law) render them void and unconscionable under California law. Opp. 11, n. 10. This argument fails for two reasons. First, the enforceability and scope of those agreements are reserved for the arbitrator based on their incorporation of the HKIAC rules and thus premature at this stage. Fujitsu Semiconductor Ltd. v. Cypress Semiconductor Corp., 2023 WL 3852701, at *6 (N.D. Cal. June 5, 2023) (incorporation of near identical Japanese arbitration rules in Convention sufficient for delegation). Second, the Convention displaces state laws that void or render unconscionable⁴

⁴ Note: Although this Circuit has yet to reach the question, other Circuits have found that unconscionability arguments as a whole are unavailable to invalidate Convention agreements at the arbitration enforcement stage. See, e.g., Bautista v. Star Cruises, 396 F.3d 1289, 1302 (11th Cir. 2005) (unconscionability defense unavailable because “[d]omestic defenses to arbitration are transferrable to a Convention Act case only if they fit within the limited scope of defenses”)).

1 out-of-state choice-of-law or venue provisions. See, e.g., Amizola v. Dolphin Shipowner, S.A., 354 2 F. Supp. 2d 689, 694 (E.D. La. 2004) (finding Convention preempted near identical LA statute); 3 MouseBelt Labs Pte. Ltd. v. Armstrong, 2023 WL 3735997, at *7 (N.D. Cal. May 24, 2023)
 4 (finding in choice-of-law dispute that “allowing each state … to impose its own test for threshold 5 questions of arbitrability would create an unmanageable tangle of arbitration law in the United 6 States, lead to forum shopping, and frustrate the uniform standards the New York Convention and 7 Chapter 2 of the FAA were enacted to create.”).

8 In sum, Yu’s failure to challenge the formation or delegation provisions of the three other 9 agreements provides this Court with an equal and independent basis upon which to compel 10 arbitration of Yu’s state court claims as to the threshold issue of their arbitrability.

11 C. A Stay of These Proceedings and Limited Injunction of the Concurrent State 12 Court Proceedings Is Still Warranted

13 In the event this Court compels less than all of Yu’s state court claims to arbitration on the 14 threshold issue of arbitrability (it should not), a stay of the remaining state court proceedings 15 pending that determination is appropriate. Although generally discretionary, when claims are 16 legally or factually interrelated, a stay of non-arbitrable claim is often both “proper” and “even 17 incumbent upon the Court.” Lee v. Tesla, Inc., 2020 WL 10573281, at *10 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 1, 2020) 18 (staying non-arbitrable UCL claim because “to order public injunctive relief under the … UCL …
 19 [plaintiff] must succeed on the merits of his [own] claims under those statutes”). To do otherwise 20 would risk inconsistent judgments and inefficiencies on this Court. Id. at *9; Leyva v. Certified 21 Grocers of Cal., Ltd., 593 F.2d 857, 863-64 (9th Cir. 1979) (courts may consider whether “it is 22 efficient for its own docket” to deny a stay of non-arbitrable claims pending arbitration).

23 Allowing Yu to continue litigating any state court claims compelled to arbitration similarly 24 risks irreparable injury. Prograph Int’l Inc. v. Barhydt, 928 F. Supp. 983, 992 (N.D. Cal. 1996)
 25 (Orrick, J.) (employer “would be irreparably harmed if [the employee] were permitted to continue

26
 27 described” in the treaty); Rogers v. Royal Caribbean Cruise Line, 547 F.3d 1148, 1158 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing Bautista 28 with approval when holding that “[e]ven assuming unconscionability renders an agreement ‘null and void’ under the Convention, [the employees] ha[d] not carried their burden of establishing that the arbitration clause…is unconscionable”).

litigating these claims in state court while the same claims are being arbitrated”). Yu’s demonstrated history of gamesmanship confirms the risks attendant to failing to issue a stay as to his state court claims. Indeed, in his various claims against BDI, Yu has withdrawn his own request for a temporary stay of the state court proceedings upon BDI’s removal of the instant action; thereafter refused to stipulate to a stay in the state court proceedings, forcing Defendant Gao to file a motion for temporary stay; filed a non-opposition styled as an “opposition” in response to the motion for stay; and “reserved the right to challenge any future request to stay the state court action.” Opp. 13, n. 8. Such gamesmanship and its attendant risks weigh heavily in favor of this Court granting a stay should any state court claims not be compelled to arbitration.⁵

III. CONCLUSION

As set forth above, Yu has utterly failed to place the ECIAA’s formation sufficiently “in issue” under Section 4 of the FAA; therefore, this Court should compel Yu’s state court claims to arbitration on the threshold issue of their arbitrability under the ECIAA. This Court should also concurrently stay both this and the concurrent state court proceeding pending that arbitrable determination. Alternatively, even if the Court finds that Yu has raised a sufficient factual dispute under the ECIAA (he has not), the three other agreements provide an equal and independent basis upon which the Court should grant the requested relief.
